SOFT COLOR POPS

What makes a home feel warm is the colors, textures, and layers that are used. This home uses an amazing array of warm materials and textures such as neutral floral and nature-inspired wallpapers, beige-toned and neutral walls, whitewashed oak floors, with linens and textural upholstery fabrics as well as warm luxury wool rugs, elevating the homely plush feeling that the house was designed to exude.

UNDERSTATED LUXURY

INSIDE

IT FEELS LIKE HOME

Tucked in a beautiful and picturesque street that is laden with exceptionally designed homes, this standout renovation was redesigned by none other than famous Austin Architects, Tim Barber Architects. With a reputation for their visionary designs and meticulous attention to detail and a portfolio that spans residential, commercial, and public spaces, the firm embraces a harmonious blend of modern aesthetics and sustainable practices. Led by the creative genius of Tim Barber, the team's commitment to excellence has earned them accolades and loyal clients worldwide. Their remarkable take and outcome of the property resulted in a masterpiece. In collaboration with Cameron Design Group, a creative powerhouse in the world of interior design. With an unwavering commitment to innovation and a keen eye for aesthetics, their design philosophy revolves around crafting spaces that resonate with individuality and authenticity. From residential to commercial ventures, Cameron Design Group's expertise shines through in every project, weaving a partnership elegance, functionality, and sustainability between the two firms.

The 5 bedroom mansion with an open-door type of appeal feels like a reinvention of classic art deco. Although in a toned-down context, the color palette of natural hues that spread across the house, which include beige, oatmeal, blush, heaven grey, and beacon grey, all came together beautifully, with toned-down pops of color through the use of accessories and accents such as the stand-out art deco dining table with brass accents that is surrounded by antiquated leather dark lilac and brass chairs. There's a beautiful sense of composure and classic styles etched through color and material. Linen fabrics, jacquard cushions and pillows, and wool throws, all add to the elevated dimension of understated luxury. There are ample fixtures and accents of brass, gold, and bronze throughout the living areas, complementing the wood and beige-toned walls.

The bathroom design is almost unexpected, although quite different in feel to the rest of the house because of the use of marble, with a Carrara Statuarietto marble constructed rectangular bath and shower, there's a very sophisticated blend of old world and modern panache. The matching wool Aztec-ish pattern runners and rugs between the bathroom, long hallway, and entry hall are an added complementary feature.

Large colonial picture windows maintained the classic theme of the entire home, adding ample light and a view of the beautiful exterior surroundings, including the amazing landscaped garden by Thompson & Hanson Landscape Architecture, a distinguished firm renowned for its expertise in creating captivating outdoor spaces. With a blend of visionary design and horticultural prowess, they craft enchanting landscapes that harmonize with nature and elevate the human lifestyle and experience.

I must say, this is one of my favorite homes so far because it just feels like home. It is certainly not a "showy" house. Because of its warmth and natural character, it feels welcoming to family, which makes it the perfect home.

EDITOR'S PICK

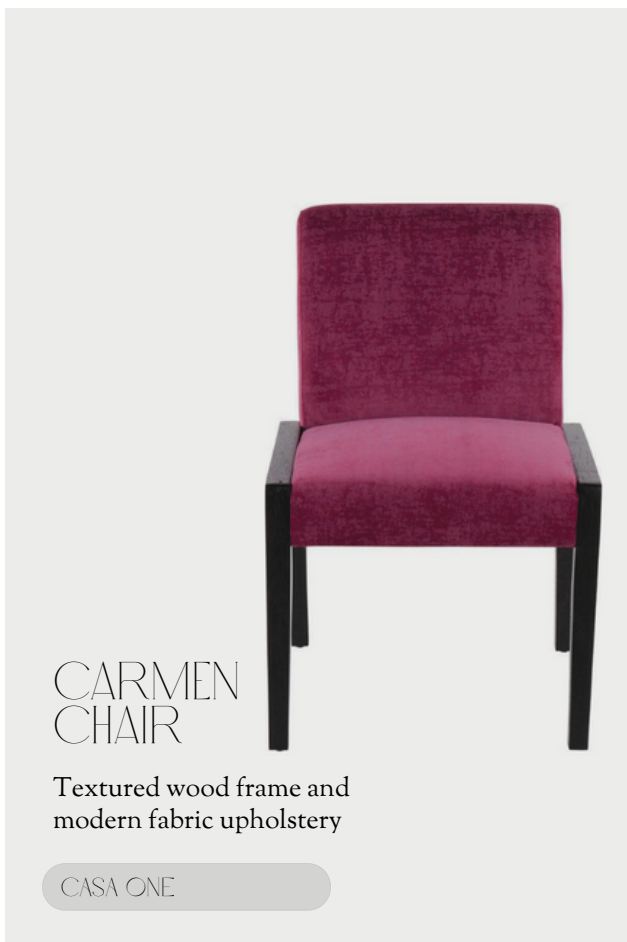

One of my favorite wallcoverings by renowned designer Phillip Jeffries, this wallpaper is adorned on grasscloth, silk, linen, paper, authentic metallic leaf, or wide-width vinyl, this authentic artwork evolves into an immersive mural wallcovering. With eco-friendly luxury, as rapidly renewable hemsps and cork serve as sustainable grounds for printing and an extensive palette and customizable options, each piece is crafted to order, delivering unmatched beauty.
